RINGSIDE ROUNDUP

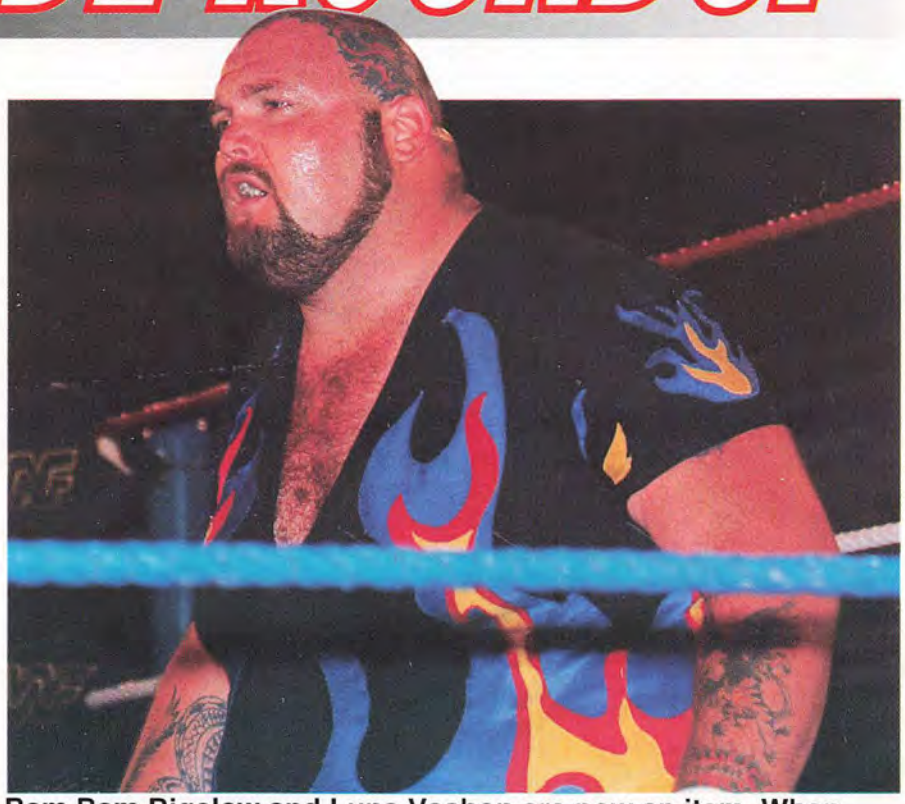
There has been plenty of action on the wrestling scene this past month. As we go to press, Yokozuna is still the WWF champion—but his championship reign is being challenged by America's newest hero, Lex Luger. Luger has abandoned his "Narcissus" image in favor of an "All American" persona, and the fans have taken to him with open arms. In fact, as we go to press, Luger is in the middle of a bus tour which will take him throughout America.

Luger is traveling on a bus decked out in the patriotic red, white and blue colors. The purpose of the Lex Express "Call to Action" tour is to make Luger into a national hero. Whether Luger will ever be able to replace Hulk Hogan is another matter entirely, but for now Luger has been gaining quite a bit of attention as he travels the highways and byways of the "good old US of A."

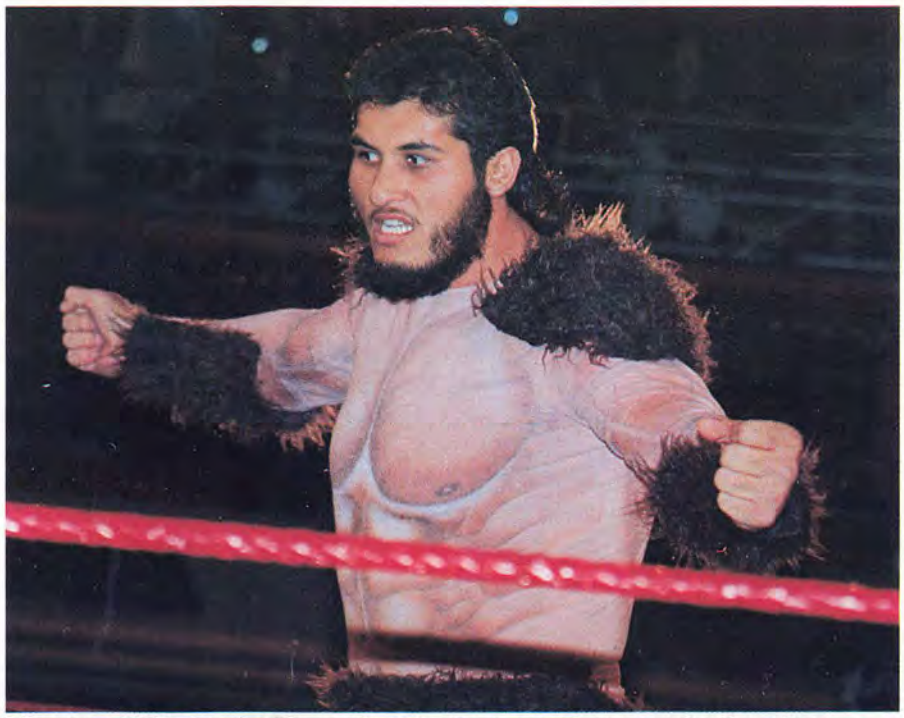
By defeating Barry Windham for the NWA World's Heavyweight title, Ric Flair has now won ten World Championships! Now that's an accomplishment that, in all probability, will never be duplicated!

What's the matter with Crush? The popular Hawaiian has been having nothing but trouble in the past few months. Right now Crush is out of action and resting at home after suffering a collapsed chest cavity compliments of Yokozuna.

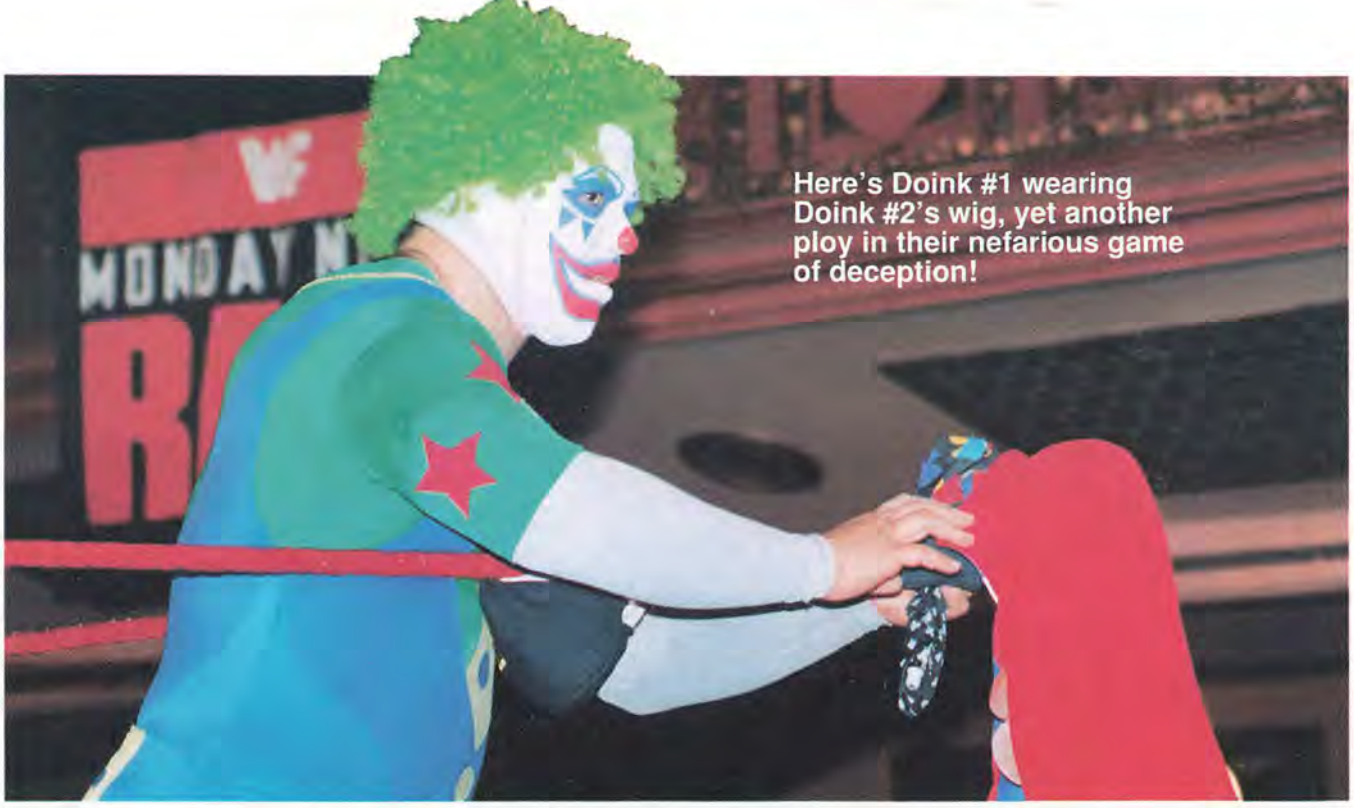
The 1-2-3 Kid has looked sensational in his recent WWF bouts. After his rocky start, The Kid has finally showed what he is capable of doing inside the squared circle.



Bam Bam Bigelow and Luna Vachon are now an item. When they rub their scalp tattoos together the sparks just fly!



The Giant Gonzalez has shown more endurance in the ring since he lost that hot-under-the-lights fur that used to grow out of his costume.



Here's Doink #1 wearing Doink #2's wig, yet another ploy in their nefarious game of deception!

"Pretty" Paul Roma and "The Enforcer" Arn Anderson should be the new WCW World Tag Team champions by the time you read this. Roma and Anderson have meshed together perfectly.

Men on a Mission (Oscar, Mabel and Big Mo) are the latest team to hit the WWF. Their "mission" is to win the WWF tag team title. The Steiners, however, have a mission of their own—and this is to drive MOM out of the Federation!

Road Warrior and Legion of Doom member Hawk is expected to join WCW. With Hawk around, both Big Van Vader and Ric Flair better be very careful or else they will find themselves without their championship belts.

Jake "The Snake" Roberts has just completed a successful tour of the Orient. Also on tour were Pat Tanaka, The Cheetah Kid, Johnny Rotten, Kevin Sullivan, Greg Valentine, The Power Twins, Sunny Beach and The Sensational Konan. In addition Madusa and Wendi Richter were also on hand. The group wrestled in front of sold out crowds in Singapore, Malaysia and the Philippines. Another tour is scheduled for the Fall.

UWS champion Jake "The Snake" Roberts is expected to go one on one against L.O.D. Hawk next month. Considering all the bad blood that exists between Hawk and Roberts this could be the match of the year.

Speaking of great matches, the "Texas Death Chain Match" for the title of "King of Philadelphia" between Terry Funk and Eddie Gilbert was far and away the best East Coast match this year.

Every month ECW action gets better and better and if they continue to do the things they are doing, ECW could turn into a major operation. Right now ECW action can be seen only in Philadelphia and surrounding areas on Sports Channel but ECW president Todd Gordon had been talking to other cable outlets and there is a good chance that ECW will go national in the fall.

Herb Abrams' UWF resurfaced in Minot, North Dakota at the North Dakota State Fair. Abrams says the UWF will make a big return to the wrestling scene this fall.

Bret Hart's younger brother, Owen, lost the USWA heavyweight title to Jerry "The King" Lawler in Memphis, Tennessee. Lawler now says he will finish off big brother Bret at Summer Slam to prove that he is the real King.

Former wrestler and renowned manager "Luscious" Johnny Valiant is now on the comedy club circuit tour. Recently Johnny V. took his act to NY and he had the crowd in stitches doing bits on his goombah Bruno Sammartino, his college frat brother Vince McMahon and his one-time protégé, Hulk Hogan. If you happen to hear that Johnny V. is in your town, catch his act. You'll be thoroughly amused.

Scores, New York's premier gentleman's club, has offered The Magnificent Mimi a huge guarantee to appear at the club. The offer by manager Craig Carrlino was for a cool six figures! Right now Mimi is busy on the West Coast having just completed the film "Beyond Fear" but with several UWS appearances scheduled for the fall, Mimi just may take Carrlino up on his offer.

The Million Dollar Man has left the WWF. For now he will only be wrestling in Japan and for several independent promoters England's Lord Steven Regal has looked sensational. His Lordship should have the WCW TV title by the time you read this.

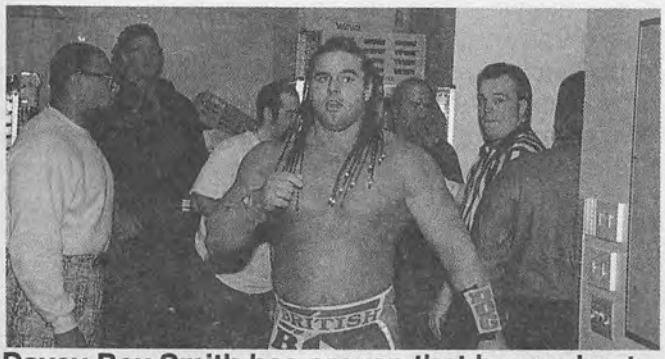
Who's the real "King" of wrestling? Eddie Gilbert and Paul E. Dangerously say that it's RINGSIDE editor George Napolitano.

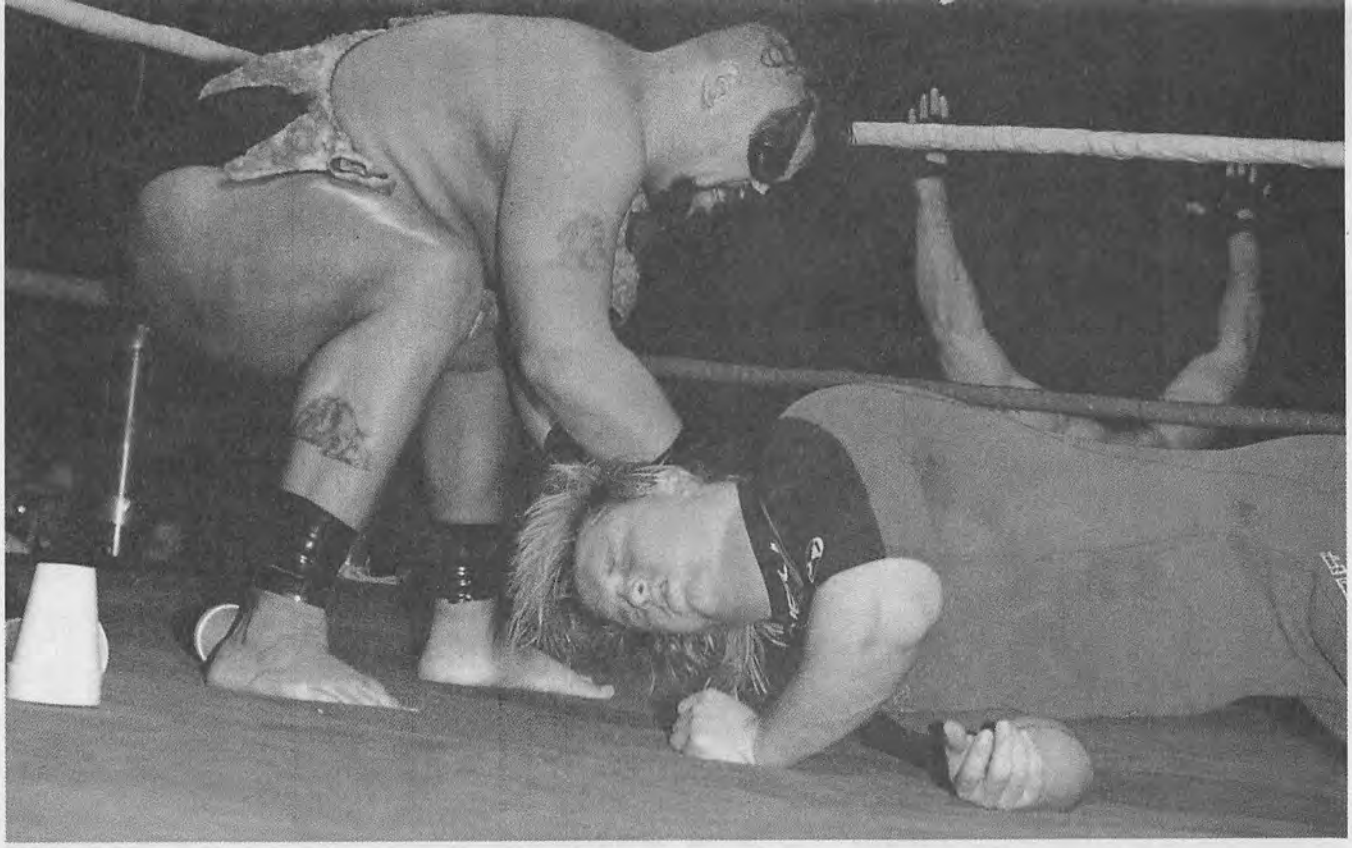
The Rockin' Rebel kicks butt for the land o' cotton!

Brian Pillman of the Hollywood Blonds watches his partner Steve Austin in action. The Blonds are still WCW tag champs, but they won't be for long if the team of Bagwell and Scorpio have anything to say about it.

Cactus Jack is still in a state of questionable sanity (Ohio, last we heard).



Davey Boy Smith has proven that he can beat Big Van Vader—now he just has to do it when the WCW strap is on the line.



While Lex Luger is the number one wrestler in America, Bret Hart is still "King" throughout Europe.

The Nasty Boys have returned to WCW and they are now being handled by Missy Hyatt! Now if you're going to have a manager wouldn't you rather have someone who looked like Missy?

"Heavy Metal" Van Hammer was recently spotted with some very beautiful company at the next great NYC restaurant, Kodnoi. "Thai food is my favorite, and Kodnoi has the best! Hammer said.

The Repo Man has resurfaced in Japan and he's using the name Demolition Smash.

For the wrestling collectors out there, you may be interested to know that I have just released a new book entitled This Is Wrestling!. It's now available at Waldenbooks, B. Dalton and other book outlets. If you would like a copy and your local book store does not have it, please ask them to order it for you. It is available through Smithmark Publishing in New York. That's all for now!

See you at Ringside. WR

The Tazmaniac recently made an appearance in the WWF and looked great, as you can see here.

The Million Dollar Man has quit the WWF, thus joining Hulk Hogan, Jimmy Hart and Brutus Beefcake among recent desertions.

After his victory over Barry Windham at Beach Blast, Flair was a World Heavyweight Champion for the TENTH time!

RINGSIDE LETTERS

KID'S THE BEST!

Dear RINGSIDE:

Just a few lines to tell you great folks at Wrestling Ringside about one of the newest superstars on the scene and my favorite wrestler: The 1-2-3 Kid. A few weeks back he was fighting Razor Ramon on Monday Night Raw. The Kid defeated Ramon, 1-2-3. Now the taco-maker is offering ten grand to get The Kid back in the ring. I think that anyone who would offer that much money just for the opportunity to fight a guy must not have a single brain in his head. Ramon, if you see this letter, take your ten grand and go back to where you came from. Open up a taco stand, you taco maker! You could call it The 1-2-3 Taco Palace. One last thought: Get out of wrestling before The Kid makes taco meat out of you! Hey Ramon, I am a cook at an Italian restaurant and pizzeria. If you can't make it selling tacos, maybe I could use you to make pizza, or at least as a dishwasher.

KID'S A WIMP!

Yo YOU GUYS:

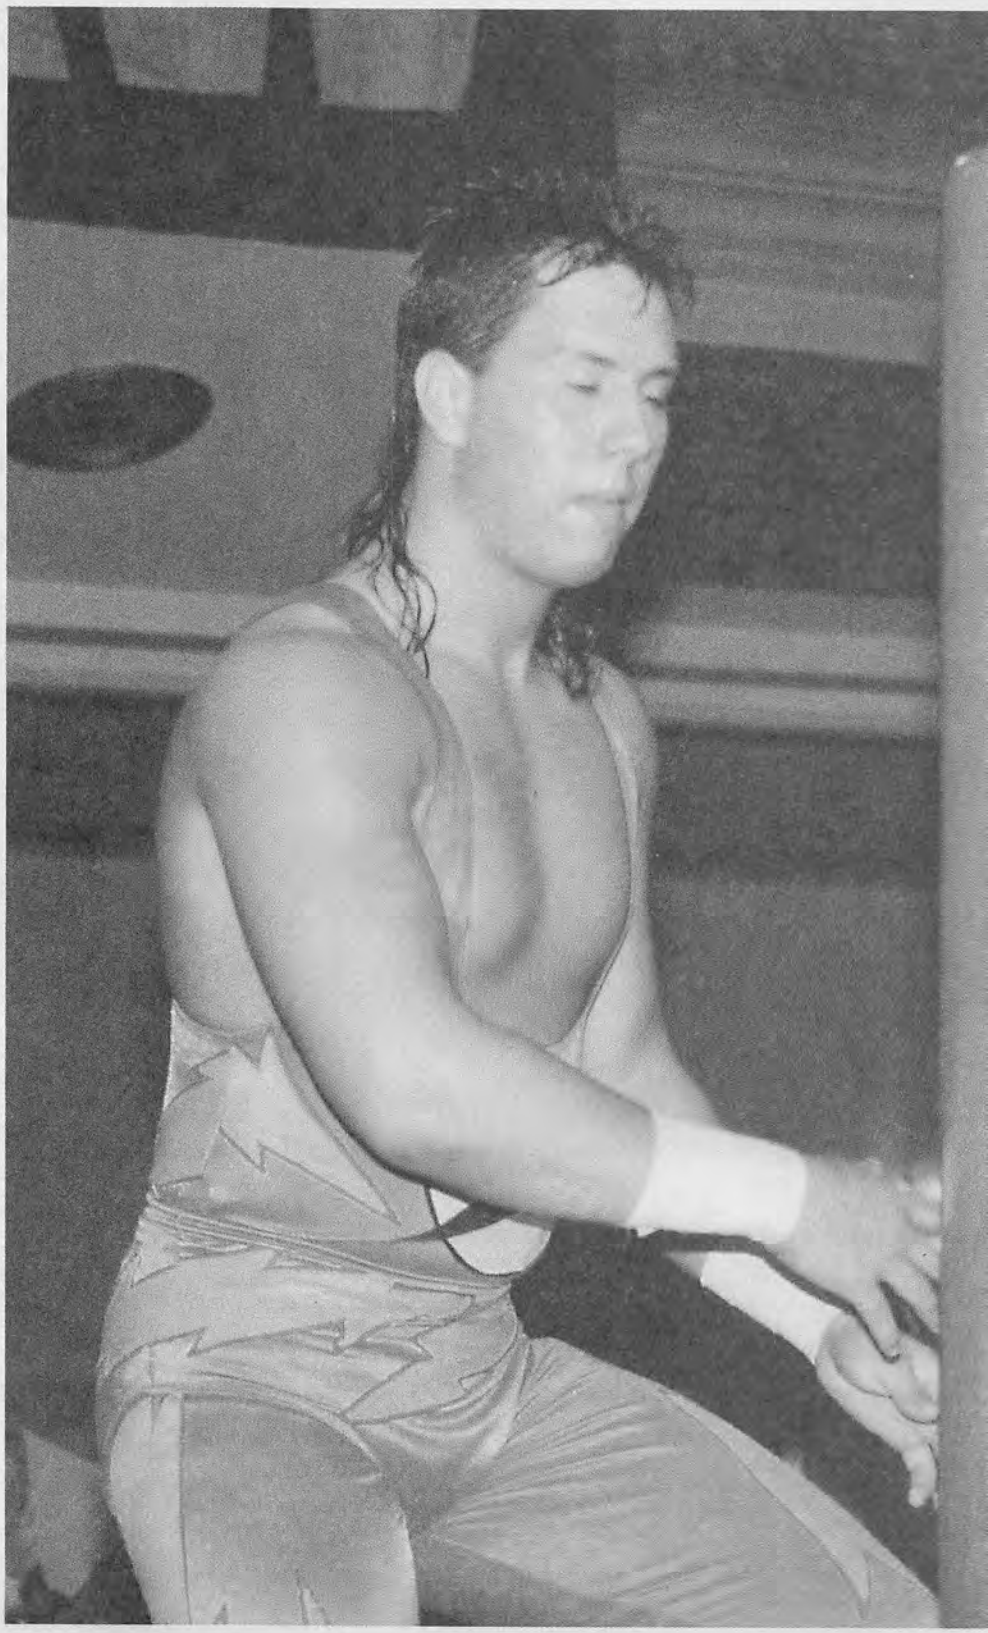
Everybody in my neighborhood is making a big fuss about this so-called 1-2-3 Kid, that skinny fellow who accidentally pinned Razor Ramon and then stole ten grand from The Bad



Opinion seems split over whether or not The 1-2-3 Kid can make it as a legitimate contender in the WWF.

Shawn Michaels can fly! Of course, he needs a little help from "The British Bulldog" Davey Boy Smith.

Are the Doinks Secret Agents? Don't laugh. The WRESTLING RINGSIDE office has had to be swept for electronic listening devices twice since the faxes began to arrive concerning a clandestine operation of unknown nationality code-named D.O.I.N.K.

Guy, but I can't figure out what all of the fuss is about. The Bad Guy is my favorite wrestler, by the way. I think the Kid is a wimp—and I know that it is only a matter of time before someone hurts The Kid, hurts...him...Bad.

DREAMS OF CACTUS

Dear RINGSIDE:

Last night I had the strangest dream: I dreamed it was the middle of the night and I woke up in my bedroom in the dark on the second floor of my parents suburban home. The only light was the blue hue of a full moon. I made the mistake of looking at my bedroom window because swinging on a tree branch was Cactus Jack grinning at me with that lunatic toothless smile of his, only in the dream he wasn't called Cactus Jack, he was called Sir Lawrence Talbot and he kept saying over and over again, "You don't understand, I turn into a wolf." It was the strangest dream I ever had. At least, I think it was a dream.

RAZOR SHARPENS HER SENSES

Dear RINGSIDE:

I think wrestling's #1 hunk is...Razor Ramon! Grease and all! Physically, Ramon gets me going like nothing else, with his absolutely perfect chest. I have a tendency towards "bad guys"—their annoying attitude can be a bit much (especially with Rick Rude!) but who else could come up with some of the hilarious comments we've heard over the years. (Roddy Piper is a perfect example.) My second favorite is Shawn Michaels. He is so intense! When he struts around the ring, oh wow! My brother even had a dream that we were dating, but Shawn was a real pussycat!!!

Your magazine is great. Keep up the good work. Please do more stuff on bad guys. You can print my name and address if you like. I love pen-pals!

WRONG ABOUT SHAWN

Dear RINGSIDE:

Not so long ago, a lot of you so-called wrestling experts said that there was nothing quite as sad as Shawn Michaels. That he was self-destructing. That one of these days Sensational Sherry's ex-Boy Toy was going to look around and realize he was fresh out of friends. Well, wrong-o, canvas breath! I would just like to say that Shawn Michaels will never be out of friends, not as long as I'm around anyway.

Any fans of Shawn, Bret and Owen Hart and Marty Jannetty, please write!

"TERRIBLE" TERRY FUNK!

This is your life!

By DONNY LAIBLE

You can't keep a great man down. Before there was the Super Bowl, before there was the 1969 Miracle New York Mets, there was Terry Funk. Let's take a look at the career of this former National Wrestling Alliance heavyweight champion:

Who was Terry's college football coach while playing offensive guard at West Texas State? Bing! Time's up. And the answer is Joe Kerbel, of course. Oh, by the way, fellow pro wrestlers Tito Santana and Ted DiBiase also took to the grid iron at West Texas State.

There was a lot of celebrating going on at Terry's Double Cross Ranch in Canyon, Texas on December 10, 1975. And with good reason. That evening Terry defeated Jack Brisco for the world heavyweight title at the Convention Hall in Miami Beach, Florida. After scoring the historic victory by applying an inside cradle hold on Brisco, Terry established a new NWA record, one that still stands today.

Eighteen years later, Terry and his older brother Dory Funk, Jr. remain the only brothers ever to have both held the world heavyweight title. (Dory, Jr. won the title from Gene Kiniski in February 1969 and held it until March of 1973.)

Terry was born on June 30, 1945 in Hammond, Indiana. Today at age 48, Terry is every bit as ornery and determined when stepping into the ring as he was for his pro debut in 1965.

That's 28 years of putting his body on the line for as many as 300 matches a year! Funk, at 6'1" and 250 lbs., almost didn't become a pro wrestler. Dory Funk, Sr., an outstanding wrestler himself, died in June 1972 while his oldest son was still world champion. Terry swears following in his dad's footsteps was never forced upon him. In fact, according to Terry, it wasn't until he was in college that he decided wrestling was what he wanted to do. Playing football at Cisco Junior College, and later at West Texas State, was all that mattered to him for several years. And it just so happened during Terry's senior year at WTS, while serving as the team captain, one of his closest friends was sophomore running back Eugene 'Mercury' Morris.

Though he's almost a lifelong Texan, Terry was born in Indiana.

Funk owns his own ranch called the "Double Cross."

Terry's first pro title was the Big Springs, Texas Championship. Everybody has to start somewhere, folks!

Yep, the same fellow who enjoyed superstar status in the pros for the Miami Dolphins. After four seasons on the collegiate level, the Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League invited Terry to their training camp for a try-out. Once reporting to the team, away from the wrestling environment he lived in at home in Amarillo, Texas, Terry had time to think about his life. Surprising few, Funk decided wrestling was his first love.

In July 1972, Terry battled the late Eddie Graham in Madison Square Garden.

Funk hammers away at Red Bastein in this September 1974 match.

He packed his gear, said good luck to the Chiefs, and turned to wrestling—just as his other brother had done. (Dory Jr. had played football at West Texas State, as well.) Traveling from promotional territory to territory with his dad since age 4, Terry was now preparing for the same gypsy lifestyle as an athlete. He had come a long way since he graduated from Canyon High School weighing only 155 pounds.

We checked the record books on this one, folks. Terry's first pro title was the Big Springs, Texas title. Remember, everyone has to start somewhere. Other belts have come his way: The Western States, United States, and Florida State championships. Titles have never been specifically targeted by Terry. If they somehow find their way around his waist, fine.

It's the process that matters most to him. Due to his aggressive manner throughout his career, the label controversial has been stuck on Funk. But don't expect any apologies. This father of two daughters has pride in his craft. That is evident each time Terry takes to the ring.

Married for 28 years, Funk has the attitude that he wants to be the best performer every night on every card in which he's booked, regardless of the stipulations. Besides his dad, Terry had many favorite wrestlers as a kid whom he studied during their matches: Lou Thesz, Verne Gagne and Mike DiBiase (The Million Dollar Man's father) top his list. Terry rates having matches with Thesz and another former World Champion, Pat O'Connor, as career highlights.

Okay, ready for another first for Terry from the record books? His first pro match was opposite Sputnik Monroe!

Professor Boris Malenko, a 40-year veteran of the mat game and currently the proprietor of a wrestling academy in Tampa, Florida, taught Terry the most about the sport once Funk began traveling the circuits. Another wrestler also "wet behind the ears" who began his career around the same time as Terry and received pointers from Malenko is Dick Murdoch, who is also from the Amarillo area.

Funk and Murdoch remain best friends today. Recently in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania both Texans appeared on the same card, and two wins were racked up. Oh, they did reminisce about the "good old days." If you are convinced that Terry actually retired from the ring years ago, you're correct—sort of.

In 1983 he retired—but in Japan only—not from wrestling in the United States. When first taking on the best that Japanese promotions had to offer in the early 1970s, Abdulla the Butcher, The Sheik and Jumbo Tsuruta were among those Terry battled. All-Japan Wrestling's Shohei "Giant" Baba is another of Funk's oldest and dearest friends. After bidding farewell to the Orient mat circles, Terry entered the WWF with Jimmy Hart as his manager.

Funk was the NWA champ in the '70s.

In his younger days, Terry played football for West Texas State University.

At 48, Funk is one of the true veterans of the sport.

Grudge matches with Hulk Hogan and The Junk Yard Dog occupied most of his time. From there, Terry moved on to the film industry. His first film as an actor was Wild Side in 1985, with his friend Sylvester Stallone. A role in Road House starring Patrick Swayze and Paradise Alley, another Stallone project, followed. Showing the same dedicated attitude toward acting as he did in wrestling, Funk worked many hours to be the best that he could be.

It was in 1989 that Funk made a full-time return to the grappling game with the NWA. Along with Thesz and O'Connor, Terry served as a judge for the May 7, 1989 championship match from Nashville, Tennessee in which Ric Flair regained the belt from Ricky Steamboat. Before a pay-per-view audience, during a post-match interview Terry sucker-punched Flair after a challenge to the champ was turned down.

Funk's eye opening re-entry to the promotion culminated in an "I Quit Match" in which the loser would retire (at least from the NWA). The final clash between Flair and Funk occurred in Troy, New York on November 15, 1989 with an estimated seven million viewers tuned into the two-man riot.

Television commentating duties with the NWA followed as well as matches with independent promotions. "Hotstuff" Eddie Gilbert in 1993 continues to be Funk's most menacing opponent on the East Coast.

There's no figuring him out. Funk comes and goes as he pleases—always has, always will. Terry has much to be proud of in his professional life. Keep the memories coming—partner! WR

THE SENSATIONAL, INTELLIGENT DESTROYER!

Still wrestling after all these years!

After 39 years on the mat, the Sensational, Intelligent Destroyer may be hanging up his tights. The same fellow who won the American Wrestling Association heavyweight title from Verne Gagne in 1968 is now in Japan for his unprecedented 31st consecutive year in touring for Japanese promotions. But, according to the legend, this may be his last. Recently—after we caught up with this wrestling legend at his home in Western New York—The Destroyer let his guard down some and explained his "fountain of youth" approach to his game.

"I don't feel the age that's on my birth certificate. Few people have been in the position where they can earn a living at a career they thoroughly enjoy, travel the world and, in doing so, not have to pay," The Destroyer explained from his home in Akron, New York.

Think about it. You wrestling fans 30 years and older, remember the advertisements in wrestling magazines throughout the 1970s offering Destroyer masks and t-shirts? Of course

In his Syracuse University colors, The Destroyer met up with then Louisville University Quarterback Erik Watts in Tokyo, Japan on December 3, 1989 when Louisville played Syracuse in the Coca Cola Bowl.

Ricky Steamboat and The Destroyer have been pals for years.

The Destroyer always wears his mask, even when he's accompanying the amateur wrestling club he coaches in Clarence NY during a parade.

you do, and chances are one or both of those items were purchased and today are tucked away in an attic trunk. The Buffalo area has always been home for The Destroyer, when not globetrotting for promotions that is. Some of his most memorable "squared circle" escapades occurred while competing for Promoter Pedro Martinez's National Wrestling Federation, based in Buffalo's War Memorial Auditorium from the 1950s until the early 1970s.

Miguel Perez was among his more frequent tag companions. Together, they challenged the likes of the Gallager Brothers (Doc and Mike), Bearcat Wright, and The Beast, to name a few. They all kept The Destroyer, then known by his legal name, Dick Beyer, hopping from ring corner to ring corner.

"Wrestling then, as I look back on my early years, seemed so simple as compared to today. I met so many interesting people. Ilio DiPaolo, one tough animal in the ring, became one of my best friends outside of wrestling and remains so today. When he's not tending to his Italian restaurant, he and I work out in the ring and train kids who show the desire to make it in the pros. You ought to see our ring. It's set up in my backyard when the snow's gone, right smack in front of a cornfield. We call it 'ring of dreams,'" The Destroyer said.

Championship belts haven't been strangers to The Destroyer's waist during his 39 years in the grappling game. And, since he tours for All-Japan Wrestling Promotions every July with a schedule of 23 matches in 28 days, technically he isn't retired and the possibility still exists for him to collect another belt.

His titles earned list reads like a "who's who" in wrestling hardware. Among the belts on display in his trophy case are the World Wrestling Alliance heavyweight strap which The Destroyer collected on three separate occasions, the first coming on July 27, 1962 when he defeated Freddie Blassie in San Diego, California. In Portland, Oregon, while competing for Promoter Don Owen of the National Wrestling Alliance, on March 1, 1964 it was the Pacific Northwest title that the masked man stripped from then champion Mad Dog Vachon. About one year later, while teaming with his future brother-in-law, Billy Red Lyons, the world tag belts became their property. But it was the Buffalo-Niagara Falls-Cleveland area, the main stops for NWF mat action, that was always considered The Destroyer's home turf. Johnny Powers, Dominic DeNucci and Johnny Valentine always brought out the best of his talents as the opposition.

Former WWF Tag Team Champion Black Jack Lanza playfully tugs The Destroyer's mask.

The Destroyer is a genuine wrestling legend in Japan.

However, the Orient is where The Destroyer first made international wrestling headlines. His name is right up there today alongside Rikidozan, Antonio Inoki, and Shohei "Giant" Baba as authentic wrestling legends in Japan. Once solidifying himself as an international celebrity, The Destroyer hosted television game shows and endorsed a variety of products in the Orient. And the whole time, as is the case to this very day, he always wore the mask.

Today, he has a ring set up in the cornfield behind his house. He calls it his "Ring of Dreams."

The Destroyer coaches Akron Central School's football team in Akron NY.

Today, The Destroyer no longer lives out of a suitcase. He has been teaching elementary physical education for ten years at Akron Central School in Akron, New York.

After classes, he coaches swimming and football. That keeps The Destroyer on the go almost as much as his former match scheduling did. The biggest advantage now is he gets to be home each evening to dine with his wife, Wilma.

And from the recent moves of two of the Destroyer's children, it appears the wrestling trade will remain in the Beyer family for years to come. On February 14, 1993 in Tampa, Florida, The Destroyer's eldest daughter Kris married wrestling superstar "Dangerous" Danny Spivey. And Kurt Beyer, The Destroyer's son, is following in his dad's footsteps as a wrestling sensation for All-Japan. With the success the figure four leg-lock has brought The Destroyer, it's no surprise that "Destroyer Jr." had taken to using the same finisher.

Be it in golf outings, school events, attending Syracuse University alumni functions, The Destroyer is always giving of his time to charitable causes. While attending the Central New York collegiate powerhouse in the 1950s, varsity letters were earned as a member of the wrestling and football teams. Among those whose careers The Destroyer has had a hand in launching are Earthquake, Mr. Fuji, Irwin R. Schyster, and Genichiro Tenryu.

"To give me an advantage over my opponents—who at the time were getting used to some of my moves as The Destroyer—for awhile I changed identities, including masks. As Mr. X, I beat Verne Gagne for the AWA belt. Not bad strategy wouldn't you say?" The Destroyer stated.

So now you know there's yet another wrestling legend doing just fine. What a treat it is to know that with more than 25 years of service in the sport, The Destroyer remains enthusiastic about making future contributions. What a true wrestling treasure!

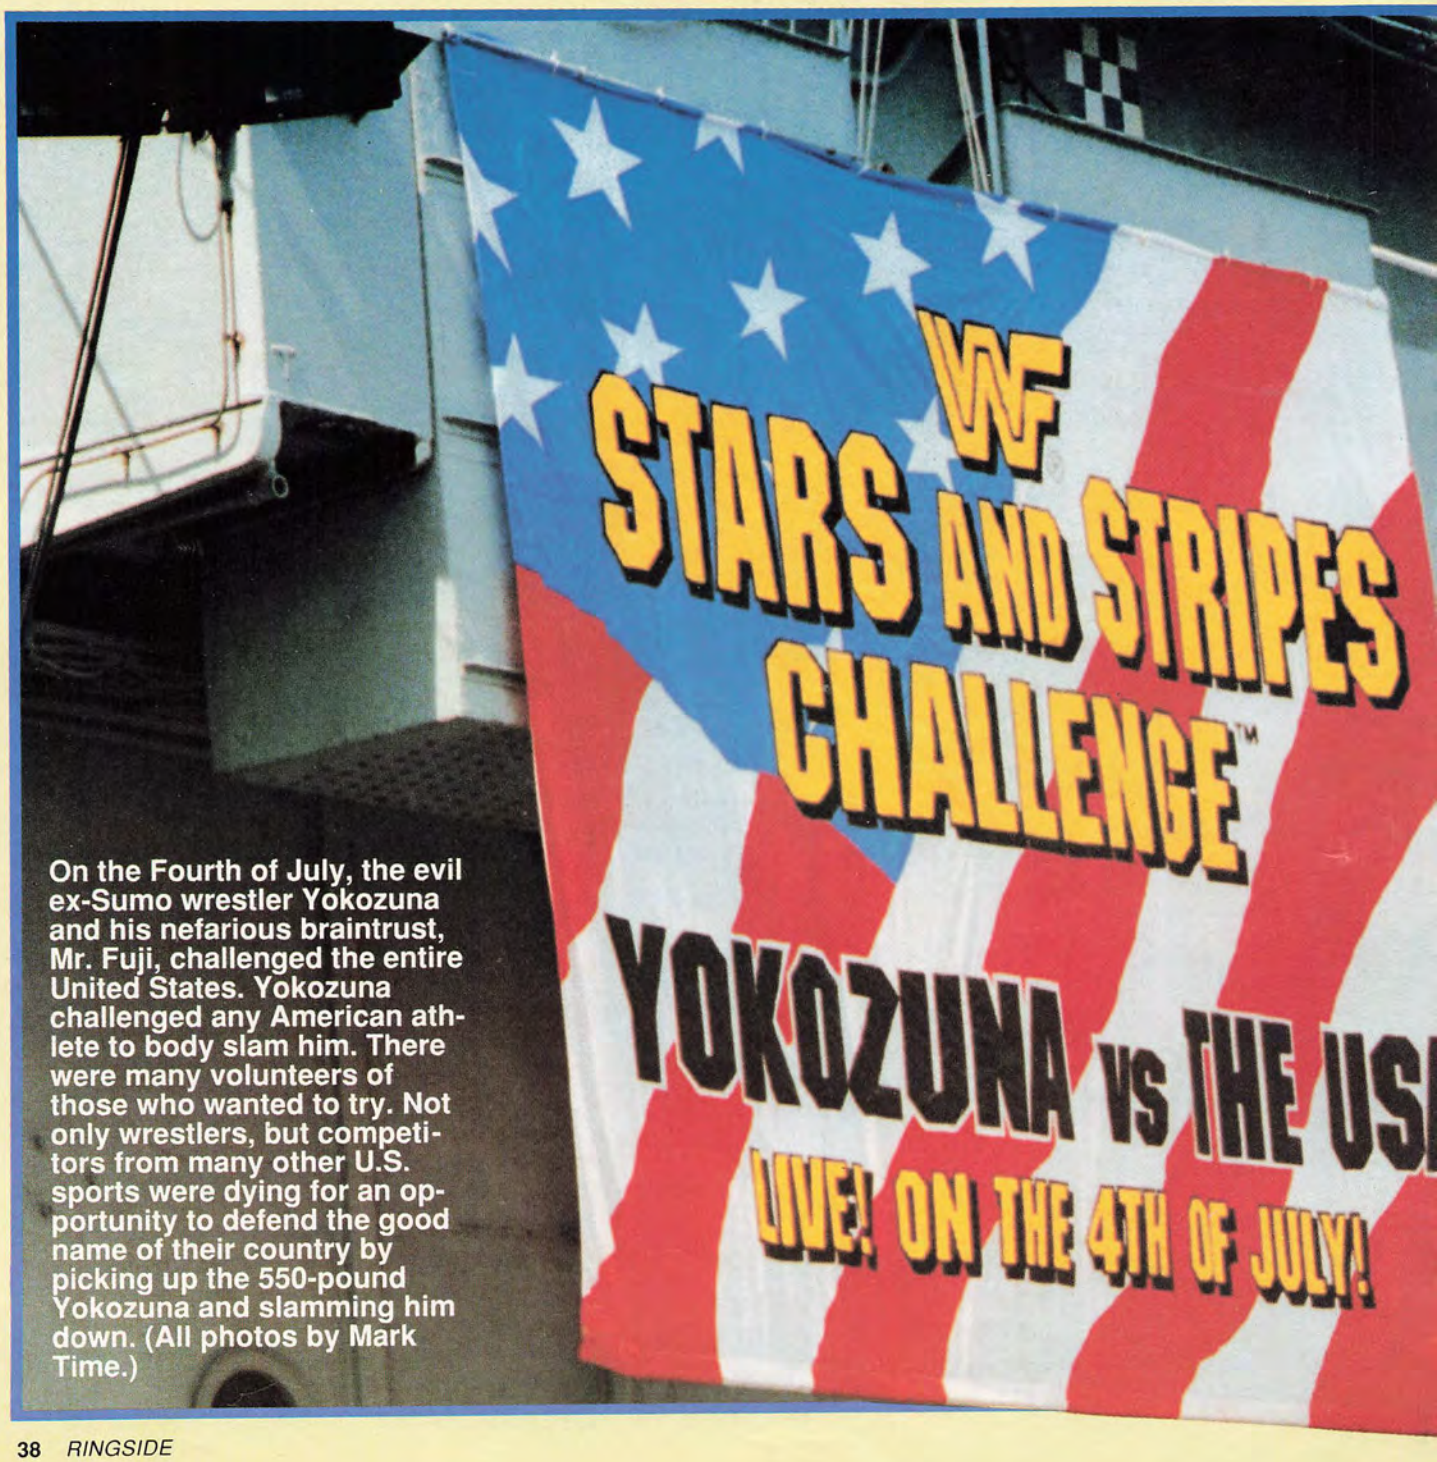
RING OF DREAMS

"Build it and they will SLAM!"

LUGER SLAMS

Lex answers 4th of July challenge, becomes Ame



On the Fourth of July, the evil ex-Sumo wrestler Yokozuna and his nefarious braintrust, Mr. Fuji, challenged the entire United States. Yokozuna challenged any American athlete to body slam him. There were many volunteers of those who wanted to try. Not only wrestlers, but competitors from many other U.S. sports were dying for an opportunity to defend the good name of their country by picking up the 550-pound Yokozuna and slamming him down. (All photos by Mark Time.)

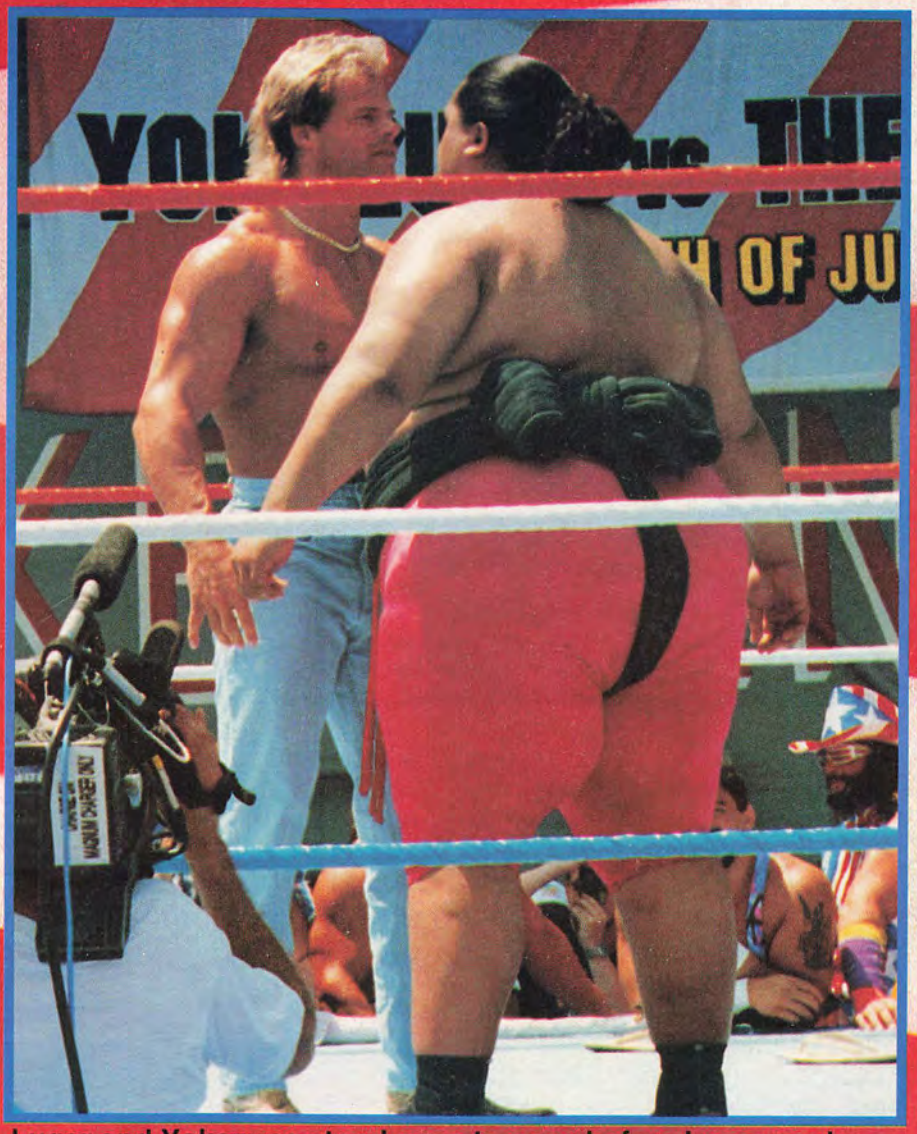
The Master of Ceremonies for the Independence Day special aboard the U.S.S. Intrepid aircraft carrier was Randy "Macho Man" Savage.

Stars and Stripes Challenge" was the name given to the big Fourth of July event staged aboard the USS Intrepid in New York City's famed harbor. For weeks prior to the challenge Mr. Fuji, Yokozuna's manager and confidant, boldly predicted that no other sports personality would ever be able to bodyslam the massive Yokozuna.

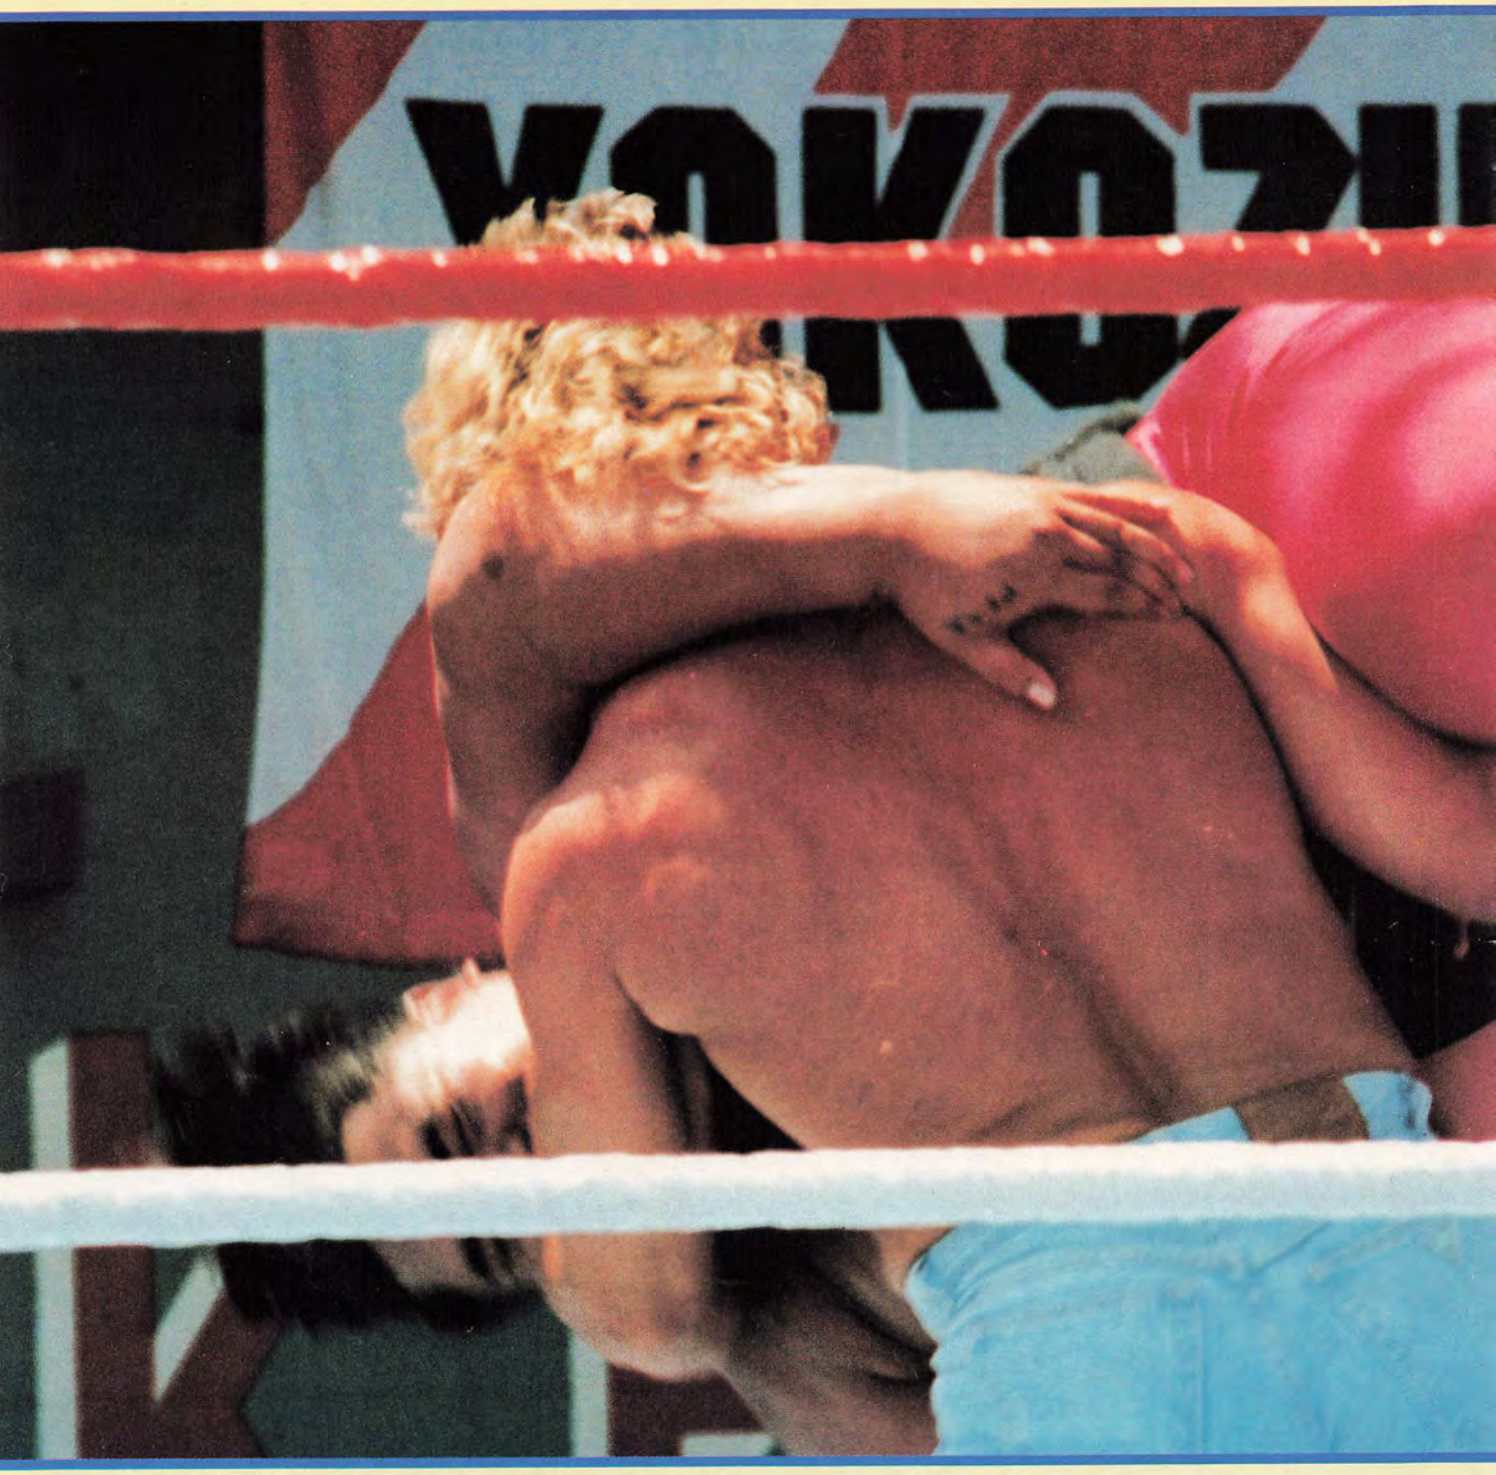
Savage chats with Todd Pendergill, the host of WWF Wrestling Mania on the USA Network on Saturday mornings. Yokozuna is already in the ring at the far right. That's Mr. Fuji carrying the Japanese flag. At the far left is the challenger Crush—who tried and tried but could not bodyslam Yoko!

Luger said he would bodyslam Yokozuna for the honor of America. The crowd went nuts with its approval.



Luger and Yokozuna stood nose to nose before Luger made his attempt.

All of the athletes gathered on the ship tried to get Yokozuna up and off his feet, but none of them could do it. Then something happened. A helicopter appeared in the distance. On that helicopter was Yokozuna's final challenger of the day, Lex Luger!



After learning of the boast, ten football players, two hockey players and even a jockey took Fuji up on his offer. And, just as Fuji predicted, no one was able to lift Yokozuna off his feet! Failing to lift the 550-pound behemoth were: the football Giants' Lee Ruson and Joey Smith; former Giants Billy Taylor and George Martin; Jerry Baldinger from the Bills; Jim Jensen, Mark Higgs and Keith Simms from the Dolphins; Jim Capen from the Packers and Bill Fralic from the Detroit Lions. (Editors note: Fralic also participated in the Wrestler-Football Battle Royal in Chicago at WrestleMania II.) The hockey players who failed to move Yokozuna were Sean Cornin of the Flyers and Peter Paglianetti of the Penguins. Ninety-five pound jockey Julio Pezua also gave it his best shot, but he too failed in his quest.

Luger says, "I wanted to show the world that no one–not even Yokozuna–can stand in America's way!"

Just when it looked like Yokozuna had withstood the "Stars and Stripes Challenge" a helicopter—emblazoned in the red, white and blue of the USA—landed on the deck of the Intrepid. Out strode Lex Luger himself, decked out handsomely in red, white and blue. Making his way to the makeshift ring, Luger grabbed the microphone and challenged the big Sumo wrestler himself. A shoving match ensued and after tossing Yokozuna into the ropes Luger picked him off his feet and cleanly body slammed him to the mat!

As Yokozuna hit the mat everyone aboard the aircraft carrier cheered long and loud for America's newest hero, Lex Luger!

After the proceedings a jubilant Luger said, "It's an honor and privilege for me to show the world that, on our Independence Day, no one is going to stand in America's way. From this day forward I will do everything in my power to abide by the rules and live my life for the good of the good old US of A."

Lex Luger certainly made a name for himself aboard the USS Intrepid. Ever since he has been traveling by private tour bus (appropriately named "The Lex Express") throughout the USA on what he is calling his "Call To Action" tour. Luger's ultimate goal is to strip Yokozuna of the WWF title and in the process become America's number one hero. Whether he can do this is another story, but for now the one-time Narcissus has abandoned his egotistical ways in favor of a more relaxed, down-home "American" demeanor—and the fans are loving it.

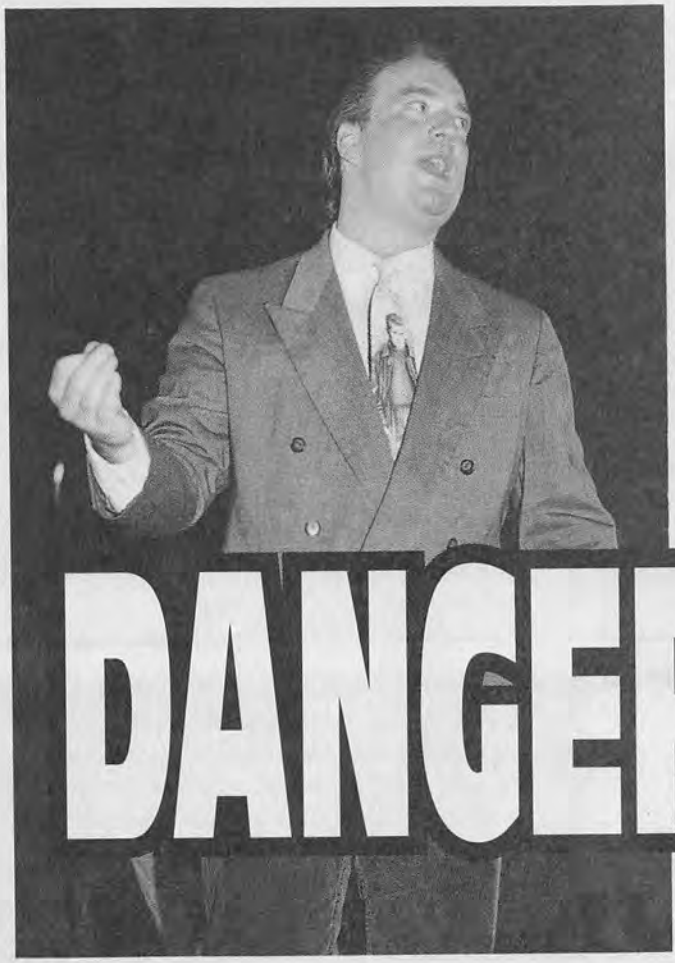
The Man You Love To Hate!

PAUL E. DANGEROUSLY!



Hey Paul E., we dig the James Dean tie! (Photos by Donny Laible.)

Interviewer. Manager. Strategist. And let's not forget all-star schmoozer. Whatever particular role Paul E. Dangerously is called upon to captain, the brash mouth from Scarsdale, New York does it better than anyone in the wrestling game today. Why him? The energy, intensity and determination to win demonstrated by Paul E. is exhausting just to watch, let alone compete against. Recently we caught up with Dangerously directing his "troops" at ringside in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. What excitement!

Not yet 30 years old, Dangerously has already done it all in wrestling. Paul E. has even wrestled. His protégés have collected nearly a dozen singles or tag team championships under Dangerously's leadership.

Paul E. doesn't like to stay in any one promotion for more than a year. He gets the jitters, feeling as if the opposition—be it wrestlers or fellow managers—are decoding his ringside plans. Still, Dangerously can always be located wheeling and dealing with clients and promoters. He conducts business from his family's mansion, or the "castle" as Dangerously proudly refers to it.

Dangerously seems like he has been around the wrestling game for an eternity, yet he is still shy of his 30th birthday.

This is the same place where his passion for the sport began and where, while a teenager, he wrote stories about his favorite mat marvels for our own editor, George Napolitano. Today a major player in the upstart Eastern Championship Wrestling promotion headquartered in Philadelphia, Paul E. has once again collected top talent to keep his "Dangerous Alliance" a major powerhouse in wrestling.

His detractors claim that, in handling the careers of three talented but very different personalities in the ECW alone, Paul E. is spreading himself a bit too thin. For the average man that might be the case, but Paul E. enjoys his work far too much to find excuses to rest. The chances are great that by the time you read this, Dangerously will be a central figure in yet another promotion.

The ECW Arena in Philadelphia is still dark and quiet. The always hyper Paul E. inspects the championship belts that have just been taken out of their secured carrying case. "Not shiny enough," he says. Dangerously orders an aide to create a mirror effect on the gold-plated straps. After ten minutes of polishing, finally Paul E. is satisfied with the cleaning job. Seeing his own reflection in the TV belt made him smile. Before heading over to ECW Commissioner Todd Gordon's office to check on which officials were assigned to Alliance member matches, Dangerously talks positively and cracks jokes at Eddie Gilbert, Jimmy Snuka and the Patriot. At first, the unusual amount of time Paul E. spent with referee Kevin Lawler—as in Jerry "The King" Lawler's son—didn't set off mental alarms for Gordon. An over-concerned cornerman, that's all it was, right? Wrong. Dead wrong. As it turned out, Paul E. had been greasing Lawler's palms to see things Gilbert's way.

While signing that night's contracts, Paul E.'s portable telephone (yes, it really works!) rang three times. Moments before the doors to ECW Arena were swung open for the fans, Dangerously made a bee-line to the ring.

Even he appears to be capable of forgetting something. Amazing, huh? All four corners of the ring, the turnbuckles and ring ropes where his men would be going to work that evening, were checked for tightness. With this last safety check completed, Paul E. goes back to his locker room and shuts the door before this reporter can slip a foot through.

"Nothing personal," Dangerously shouts from the inside, followed by a group laugh. Oh, he pokes his head out five minutes before bell time inquiring about the crown size. "Capacity," he is told.

Making sure his reservations for the post-match party at the opposite end of the Arena are all set is a priority for Dangerously. Such a social function is as vital to him as making sure that no belts leave the Alliance that evening. They don't.

How did he get into managing in the first place? A dare in 1986 by Bam Bam Bigelow to give managing a try was all it took.

How Paul E. survived all four ringside appearances

June 18, 1993 remains nothing short of a minor miracle. Before the card was completed, off came his sport coat, his James Dean tie was loosened, and his voice had become noticeably hoarse from screaming at irate fans, security guards, referees other than Lawler, and photographers he claimed were cramping his style at ringside.

Paul E.'s right hand, the one not holding the weapon he disguises as a telephone, was obviously swollen to those close to the action from pounding it repeatedly on the canvas. The 90 degree plus heat, thanks to the television lights hanging above each ring corner didn't help bring down his blood pressure, either. A steady drizzle of sweat covered Paul E.'s reddened face throughout the evening. Constantly, while his ring warriors were doing their best to outsmart their challengers, Dangerously's eyes roamed from side to side in search of a flaw to capitalize on. On a few occasions, such as when Referee Lawler had his back to the combatants, Paul E. contributed in typical style by tripping the opponents as they were whipped into the ropes.

Some wrestling insiders believe that Dangerously, who also serves as the ECW color commentator during the telecasts seen weekly on Philadelphia's SportsChannel, pushes himself because he wants someday to be thought of in the same sentence as his managerial mentors and heroes: the late Grand Wizard, Captain Lou Albano, Freddie Blassie and Bobbie Davis.

When Paul E. gets involved in a project, he becomes more than a team member. He becomes the general, a leader in total control. Give the devil his due—without Dangerously around, wrestling tends to be on the dull side. What's the sport to do? You can't live without him and there are times when it's a struggle to live with him.

GM 2115 50 Mins. $65 5 Matches
A bitter dual between two young guests: CONNY (19) comes from Nuremberg and has to fight CARMEN (22) who traveled from the German Dem. Republic as our very first guest after the falling–down of the iron–curtain. A superb match! LISSY in her mid–forties challenges daughter MONIKA and gives her a match to remember. Older sister HANNI and her younger CAROLA battle for the victory but a solid draw ends the wild tussle. The Two "seniors" LISSY and HANNI (45/36) prove that they can at least be as aggressive as their younger competitors. Their match is hard fought and full of fantastic action. Finally, KARIN accepts the challenge of a guest from Frankfurt, SUSI. The experienced blonde uses very effective tactics and squeezes her rival with powerful leg–scissors but falls victim to a suddenly executed controlling hold.

WRESTLING ALL STARS visits the SUPERSTARS PRO WRESTLING TRAINING CAMP!

Pacific Coast Sports is Pro Wrestling's newest and most professional organization, home of the SUPERSTARS PRO WRESTLING TRAINING CAMP. As usual, WRESTLING RINGSIDE has managed to beat the rest of the wrestling press to an in-depth look into this new organization. This Northern California has been busy over the last year developing tomorrow's pro wrestler. WRESTLING RINGSIDE recently paid their camp a visit and came away with the following interview with the creator and Vice President of Talent, Roland Alexander.

WRESTLING RINGSIDE: We want to thank you for allowing us to come visit your camp and make the wrestling fans aware of what Pacific Coast Sports is all about.

ROLAND ALEXANDER: It is our pleasure. We knew it would only be a matter of time before the number one magazine, WRESTLING RINGSIDE and its wonderful staff caught up with pro wrestling's newest and hottest organization.

WR: What made you decide to create Pacific Coast Sports?

RA: I'd be lying to you and the wrestling fans if I didn't say that we are in business to make money, but Pacific Coast Sports goes much deeper than that. We feel that pro wrestling has been on a decline for the last several years and we are here to change the face of professional wrestling.

WR: Can you go into detail?

RA: Why, certainly. In the early eighties, pro wrestling took a different direction when the two major organizations, the WWF and WCW, went nationwide. We feel these organizations did an outstanding job in most facets of the industry. Hell, they have made big money in pay-per-views, merchandising, video cassettes, 900 numbers and even the magazine industry. The one area they failed in was the developing of talent. The major organizations sort of depended on the smaller independent organizations to supply them with talent. Problem was, the WCW and WWF ran off most of the smaller regional promotions when they went nationwide. A lot of the organizations just folded, knowing they could not compete with the Vince McMahons and Ted Turners. Therefore, came the creation of the smaller minor-league independent circuits. These independents opened wrestling schools to make a quick buck and quickly develop talent for their promotion knowing that it would decrease their overhead when booking the talent coming out of their schools for their own promotion. Individuals were being trained in periods of one to three months to become pro wrestlers. You can't learn to properly work a normal nine-to-five job in one to three months, let alone become a pro athlete, in this case a pro wrestler, in one to three months. So we saw a need to treat a wrestling school as serious as a football camp to develop better talent.

Instructor Rick Thomas demonstrates the side headlock.

WR: Are you saying that you are not a wrestling school and what you really are is a wrestling camp?

RA: Exactly! It is very difficult for an individual to learn a new trade in three to six months like most wrestling school programs are structured. You can't become a professional such as a lawyer, doctor or even accountant in one to three months, therefore, why should pro wrestling be any different?

WR: It really shouldn't. We see your point. How long is your training camp?

RA: We train for a total of 12 months. The first two months we try to give the camper a background in wrestling by teaching basic amateur wrestling. Not everyone has the high school and/or college wrestling background, therefore, we try to instill that background in all of our campers. For the next four months we teach basic fundamental pro wrestling, your holds, counters and takedowns such as hammerlocks, headlocks, arm drag takedowns, front facelocks, etc.

WR: What about the last six months of training?

RA: We feel that the last six months of training are the most important. We teach advanced pro wrestling. We teach ring psychology, aerial attacks such as dropkicks and flying head-scissors. We also work on tag-team competition. As you well know, there is a big difference in this sport between singles competition and tag team competition. The pacing is much different and the teamwork must be there. Today in wrestling, wrestlers excel in either singles competition or tag team competition but very rarely do they excel in both. There are exceptions to this as you can see with Shawn Michaels but honestly, Shawn is an exceptionally talented athlete. We also stress marketing during these six months.

WR: When you say marketing do you mean how to market themselves to various wrestling promotions?

RA: Yes, marketing themselves to various wrestling promotions and to the wrestling fans also. We feel that the interview is a lost art. We try to teach them public speaking. After all, the promotion must sell tickets. The best way I know of selling tickets is through the television interview. We want our wrestlers to be articulate on the mic. They get six months of solid semi-pro training, and it doesn't end there. Once they have their first pro match, they are encouraged to join the Pro Camp. In the Pro Camp, we analyze their matches and go right back into the ring and work on more moves, counters and trying to clean up their mistakes. We are not overly concerned with winning percentages the first couple of years. Our concern is that they are continuing to learn. Your expansion teams in baseball and basketball and football don't win during the first five years of their existence. Too much emphasis is placed in high school and college sports on winning. This is even more true in individual sports such as boxing, tennis and of course, pro wrestling.

WR: We notice you have a very complete facility. Is this to give the campers the best buy for their dollar?

RA: Yes, in a way. For instance, in our Pro Shop all of the magazines, wrestling wear, promotional items and vitamin/gain weight products are marked up just to cover cost, shipping and handling. We don't look to make a profit in our Pro Shop. The real reason we have the most complete facility in the industry is because we want to make the campers feel that this is their home away from home. Anything you want to succeed at in life requires you to eat it, sleep it and drink it. Elvis Presley used to say to acquire you must first have the desire and then you must perspire. The weight room is there for them to work on their bodies. Athletes must learn to quit taking short cuts. There are no short cuts to life. We discourage steroid use! Our Fitness Instructor has the responsibility of monitoring diets, supplementing those diets with the proper vitamin/gain weight products and putting each camper on a tailor-made weight training and cardiovascular programs. The reason we have a video/conference room is no different than the reason football teams spend a day of their weekly training in the video room. We tape many of the sessions and then go upstairs and critique their wrestling. Madusa was recently quoted in an interview with the wrestling press that Americans need to learn to train like the Japanese wrestlers. Wrestlers need to learn discipline and incorporate it into our culture. Therefore, what we want to see around here is a wrestling gymnasium with athletes working hard both in and out of the ring to achieve their goals in this profession.

In pro wrestling, it all starts off with the collar-and-elbow lockup.

WR: We noticed the training session you conducted today was very physical. How do you avoid injuries in a physical camp like this one?

RA: You don't. Injuries are a part of the wrestling game that you must learn to accept. There are certain injuries, nagging injuries that you must learn to wrestle with. Some of the more severe injuries must be dealt with differently. As much as the campers want to get back in the ring, we don't let them. We've seen it happen too many times where a camper needs to take two weeks off and instead only takes two days off, he gets back in the ring and re-aggravates the injury and now he is out for four weeks. We don't let that happen. Our Head Camp Instructor, Rick Thompson, monitors the injuries and the progress of each individual camper. Rick has been very underrated as a pro wrestler. His knowledge is infinite. Campers are always pressing Rick to teach them that extra. Rick and his staff have done an outstanding job with our first 20 campers.

Weight training is a large part of the program at the Superstars Pro Wrestling training camp. Here we see Mike Diamond, Sonny Stone and James Spicer turning it on.

WR: Who are some of the more talented wrestlers to come out of your camp as of late?

RA: All of them are more fundamentally sound than most wrestlers coming out of other wrestling schools. I can tell you a little about our top three. There is Michael Modest who is currently wrestling part-time and is also an assistant instructor at our camp in his spare time. Michael is almost a carbon copy of Shawn Michaels in terms of athletic ability. We are currently trying to bulk him up from 225 pounds to around 245 pounds. Mike has been a real student of pro wrestling. Although he has had over 50 matches under his belt, he is always at the gym when he is in town trying to develop more skill and polish the skill he has. There is Mike Diamond. Diamond has a rough cut about him, excuse the pun. Mike Diamond has as much ability as anyone that I have seen in this sport in the last 10 years that stands 6'5" and 275 pounds. He does things in the ring that really surprise me for a man his size. There is also the "Brown Bomber," Robert Grays. He has the Too Cold Scorpio approach to wrestling. He sometimes worries me. He sometimes puts his body on the line too much. He has tremendous athletic ability and is going to be one of the truly good high-flyers in the sport. His winning percentage has been below the other two but we try to drive it in him not to let that discourage him. This early in his career it is not about winning, it is about learning. As long as he comes out of every match learning something, he'll be alright. You can never say you know it all. When you do, you'll find your shoulders being pinned down to the mat. Even your ring veterans, such as Bret Hart, learn something new every time the step into the squared circle. Our campers and pro wrestlers are taught to become students of pro wrestling.

Campers are required to have a wrestling background. Here instructors give campers a lesson in basic amateur wrestling.

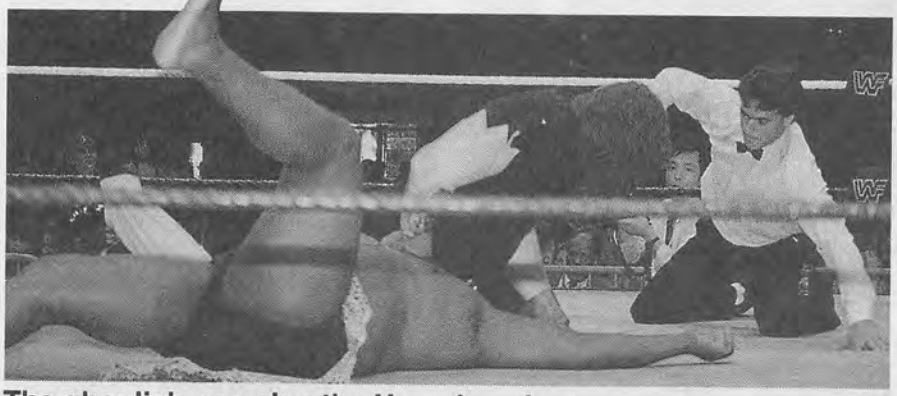
WR: We really appreciate the hospitality and the tour and perhaps we can come back sometime in the near future and talk to some of your campers.

RA: It was our pleasure. The folks at WRESTLING RINGSIDE are always welcome. Only, next time, bring a few extra copies of your great magazine. We always seem to be sold out. WR

Paul Bearer is hurt! The urn's been stolen!

IS THE UNDERTAKER FINISHED?

He's one scary dude! The WWF heavyweight championship was once claimed by The Undertaker. So what if it was for only six days? He still won it. But that was two years ago. Past feuds with Kamala, the Giant Gonzales and more recently with Mr. Hughes seem to have taken the spark out of his defense. Is the Undertaker finished? Is his wrestling career dead?



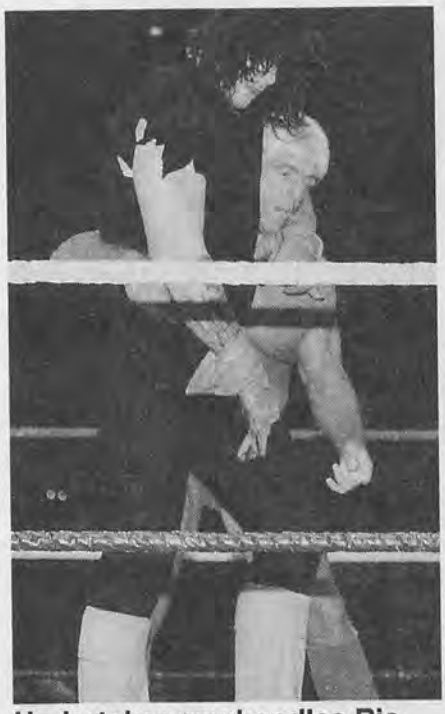
The ghoulish one pins the Ugandan giant.

Tell the truth. Haven't you detected a change in the Undertaker's ring tactics? Maybe he hasn't been able to shake the flu? Perhaps his allergies have been acting up? Better yet, it could be lingering jet lag that has taken its toll on the Undertaker. Whatever the reason, there's definitely something out of whack concerning his wrestling habits.

As the "urn" goes, so goes the Undertaker. When Mr. Hughes snatched away the object from which The Undertaker draws his spiritual powers, the Undertaker really went into a funk. But it remains nearly impossible to put one's finger on the problems that are obviously preying on his mind.

"The Undertaker has in my opinion always been highly overrated," a smug Harvey Whippleman proclaimed. "All he's qualified for is flipping burgers in a greasy spoon. No, fixing flats at some two-bit neighborhood auto shop. The man doesn't have that winning fever anymore. Ray Charles could even see that. My man Mr. Hughes beat it out of him. The Undertaker is a qualified loser, period."

Undertaker pounds Kamala.



Undertaker manhandles Ric Flair.

It was Mr. Hughes and Harvey Whippleman who ambushed Undertaker and Paul Bearer!

The Undertaker should seriously consider new wrestling surroundings where he could compete against unfamiliar talent on a regular basis. A recent match at the request of Jeff Jarrett in the United States Wrestling Association brought about encouraging results. The Undertaker—at 6'8", 280 lbs.—literally scared Brian Christopher (5'10", 205 lbs.) out of the ring—and the arena! Brian didn't just head for his dressing room. He went straight to the parking lot and off he drove!

Everyone in the Federation seems to have their own opinion as to what will shake the Undertaker from his catatonic state.

"He's a trooper, yeah, dig it. The big guy from the 'darkside' needs to chill out," says the Macho Man. "Rest will do it. Finding that eye of the tiger again should be the Undertaker's top priority. There's no question in my mind he's still among the three or four best men in the WWF. If you're asking me if he has been tipping off his moves to opponents or slowed down a step in the ring, no way, no how. What I am saying, yeah, the Undertaker has to find himself again. Speaking from experience, he's been on the go too long. The man's earned an extended vacation and he should take it! Cool, yeah!"

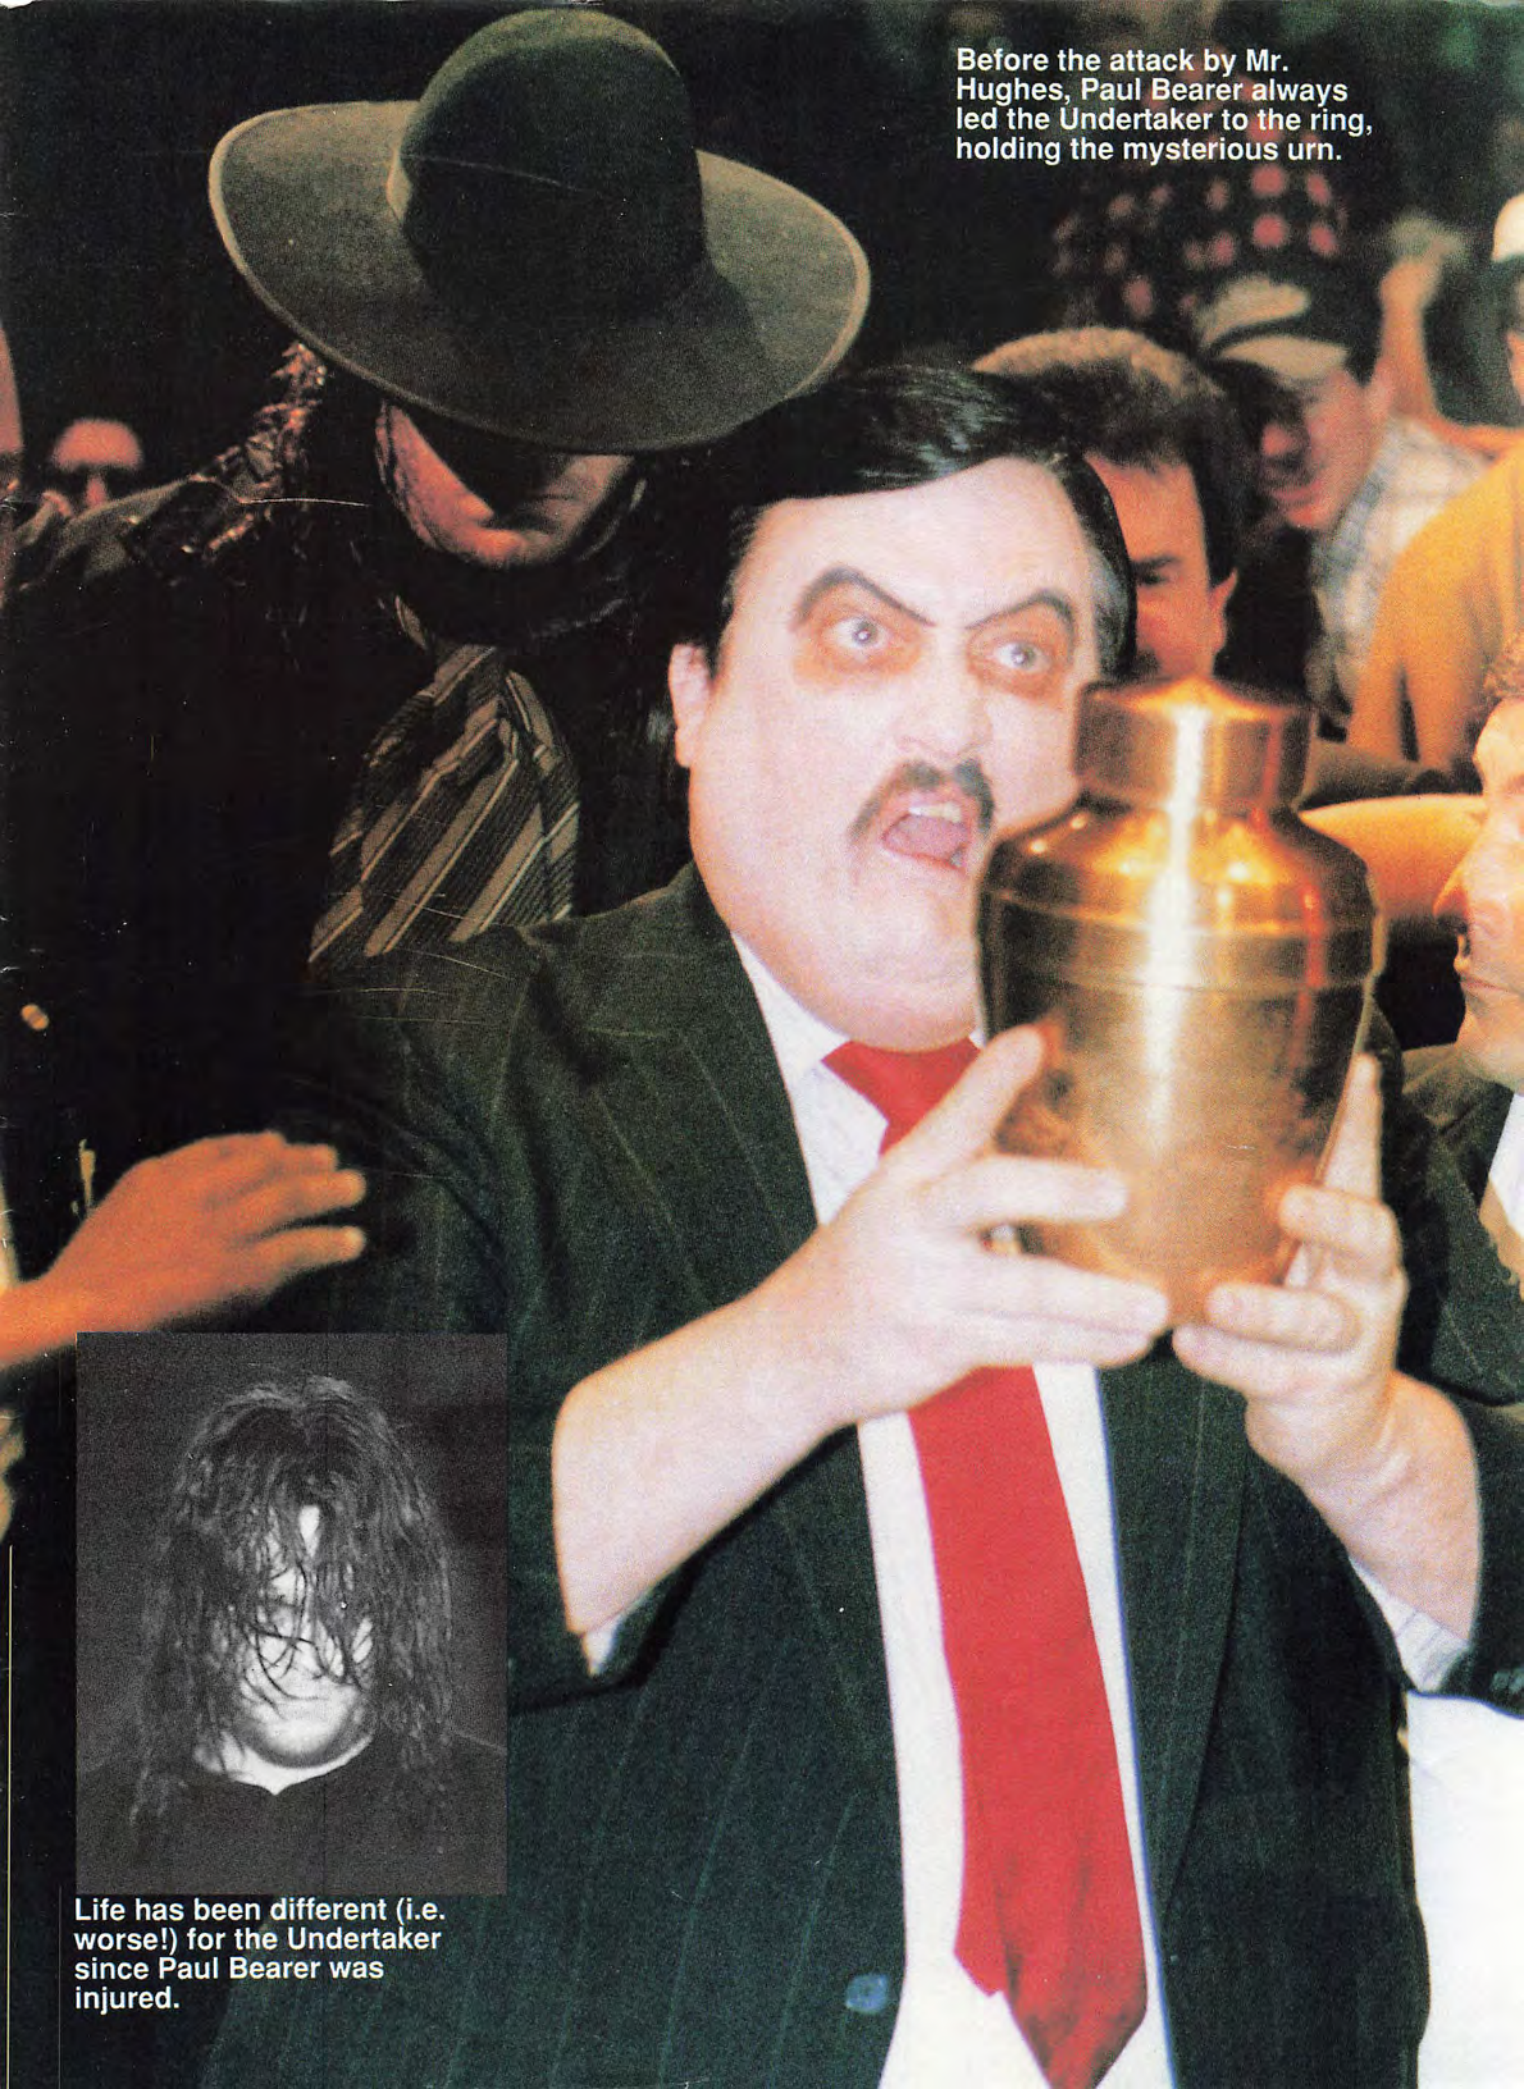
Recently while matched against Giant Gonzales in San Francisco, California, The Undertaker took a chair shot over his head by the Giant. The audience was silenced, stunned to witness the Undertaker out cold and flat on his back.

"Time away from the Federation worked for me," claims Rocker Marty Jannetty. "I cleared my head of differences I had with Shawn Michaels, then came back rested. With my priorities set, I stripped Shawn of the Inter-Continental belt. During my talks with the Undertaker, I've stressed that there is absolutely no shame in moving on from the WWF temporarily."

Now, it should be made clear to the Undertaker that the USWA is not the only choice. What about World Championship Wrestling and bad-guy Big Van Vader, for starters? Or "Mr. Wonderful" Paul Orndorff. Now he has what it takes to keep the Undertaker on his toes. Undertaker would be forced to use an array of holds that he hasn't used in years.

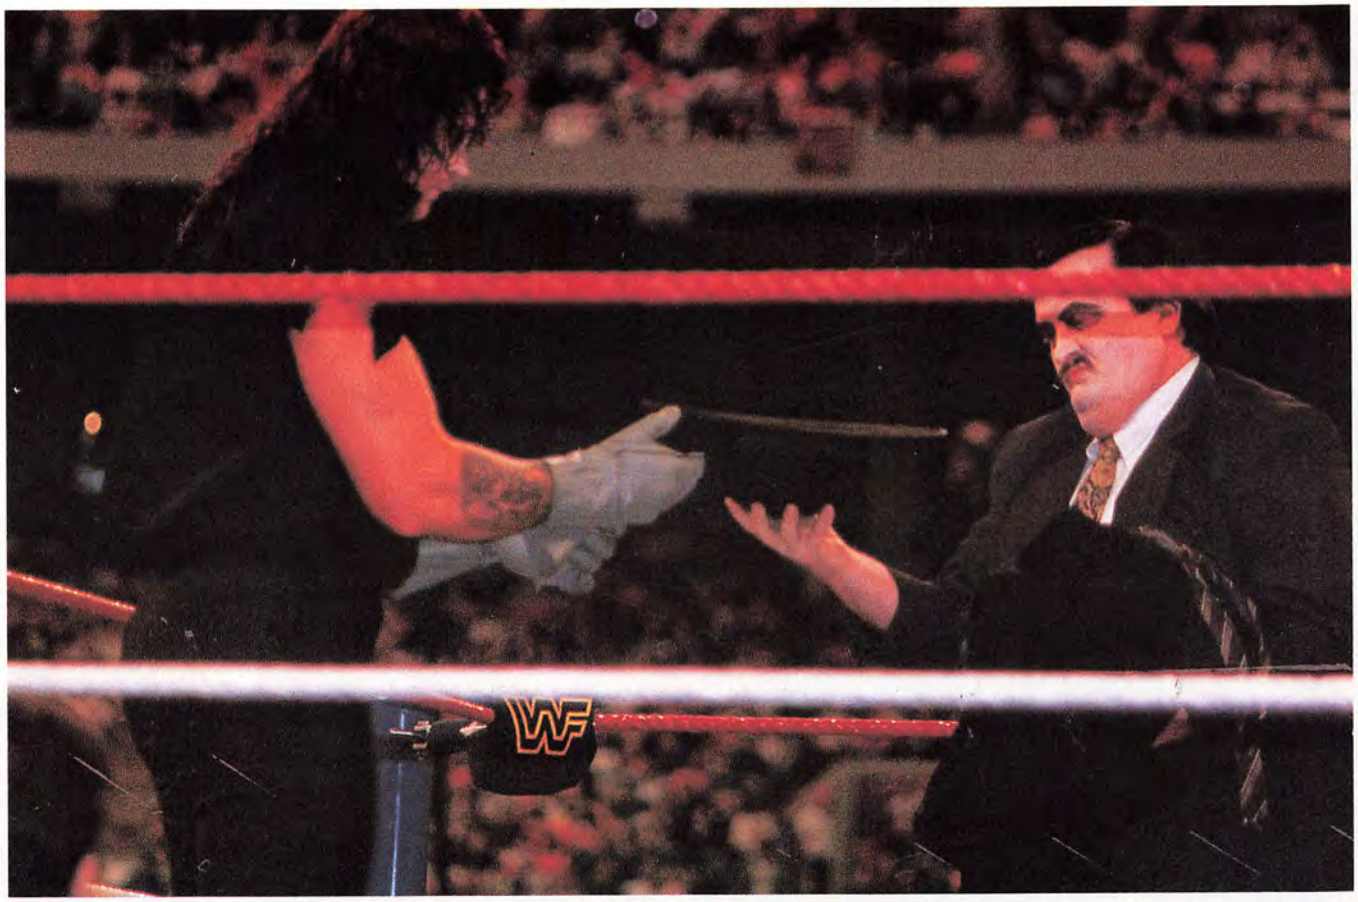
Several stars of the Federation state off the record that the Undertaker is too consumed with work. His normal routine consists of workouts in the gym, then heading back to his hotel room for rest, having his match, back to the hotel, and on the road again to start the same grind all over again. This can make anyone catatonic.

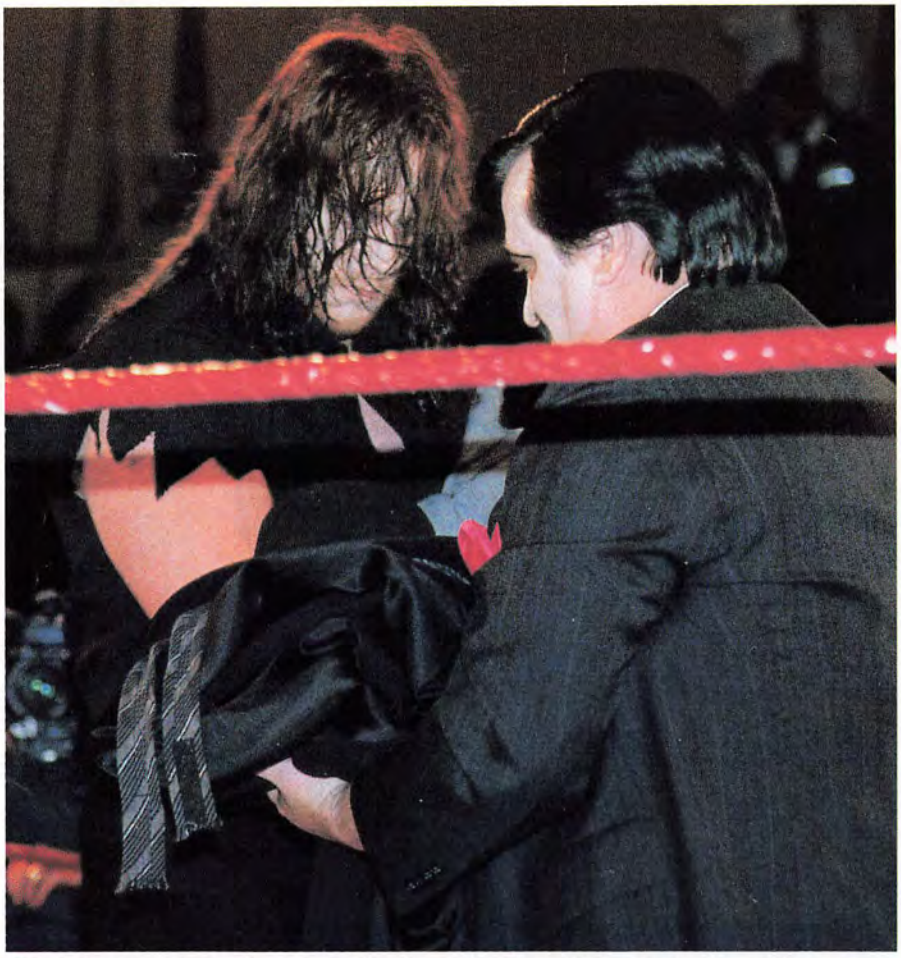
"Brother, a few hours on the beach, some time riding the surf, surrounded by beautiful women in bikinis in Hawaii and I guarantee that you'll see the first smile on the Undertaker's face. Maybe all he really needs is a good time and believe me I'll give it to him," Crush promises.



Before the attack by Mr. Hughes, Paul Bearer always led the Undertaker to the ring, holding the mysterious urn.

Life has been different (i.e. worse!) for the Undertaker since Paul Bearer was injured.





Paul Bearer functions as Undertaker's valet as well as his manager.

Setting specific goals—be it riding Diesel, Shawn Michaels' bodyguard, out of wrestling, slapping some sense into Damien Demento or finishing off Mr. Hughes—is essential for the Undertaker. Body slamming Yokozuna is another task that would most definitely have the Undertaker thought of as a superman in the eyes of his fans and fellow professionals.

Believe it or not the man from the darkside is only human. He's in a slump now and everyone experiences a slump sometime in their career. But the Undertaker has been in a slump for way too long! He needs to bust out strong. Perhaps when Paul Bearer is restored to full health and again accompanies the Undertaker on their tours around the world, the man from the darkside will once again regain that inner strength. But for now, without Paul Bearer and his urn, the Undertaker is like a lost puppydog. Will we ever see the "old" Undertaker again? Maybe the man we knew as the Undertaker has finally been put to his grave. WR
